BOERS BECOME AGGRESSIVE.

THEY ARE PREPARING TO MAKE A GAME LUNGE AT ROBERTS.

They Are Already Upon His Front and Flanks and Are Not Giving Him Time to Get Ready.

London, April 3.—The Boers are taking the aggressive now and closing in upon Roberts. Already they are upon his flanks and front. They are apparently forcing the fighting before he's ready to start to Pretoria. The main Boer army has advanced sixty miles southward from Kroonstadt and is now at Smaldal. Another big force is at Paardeberg, on Roberts left, while Oliver's command and the Boers who attacked Broadwood are on the height. Six thousand Boers are on Vaal river, and their threatening attitude is probably responsible for Methuen's hurried recall from Griquiland.

FRENCH AT WORK.

Blomfontein, April 3.—French has engaged the strong Boer command from Lady Brand which ambushed Broadwood Saturday and almost decimated him. It is generally believed that the guns and wagons which the Boers captured are certain to be recaptured.

PURE MILK AND BEEF.

A Movement Has Struck Charlotte Demanding These Luxuries.

Correspondence of the Telegram.

Charlotte, April 3—The pure milk and good meat movement has struck Charlotte and a large portion of the time of the board of aldermen was consumed last night in listening to a paper read by Dr. C. A. Misenhimer on the question of pure milk and good meat. During his stay here the physician says he knew of several instances where sick animals were put on the market and sold for beef. A committee was named by the mayor to look into the matter of a city slaughter house.

The dry goods men of Charlotte have begun a pleasant rivalry in their endeavors to present to the public the most attractive show windows. Nearly every store in town at present either has a fancy diplay window or having one built in front of the store.

J. M. Hobson, of Atlanta, a brother of Lieutenant Hobson, is in the city for the purpose of establishing a business here. Mr. Hobson is a mill man but refuses to state what his plans are.

QUEEN'S TALK AT HOLYHEAD.

Practical Aid and Gracious Sympathy has Been a Great Consolation.

Holyhead, April 3—The Queen met an ovation on her arrival at 9 o'clock this morning. In response to an address on behalf of the common council, she said: "The practical aid and the gracious sympathy for the those who have or are likely to suffer the consequences of the present war which has been shown by all classes of my subjects has been a great consolation to me during the period through which we are passing. I join your prayer that peace may soon be restored and that the blessings of heaven may long be continued upon my empire."

AGUINALDO AT SINGAPORE.

In an Interview Says He Will go Back To Manila.

San Francisco, April 3.—Aguinaldo is reported to be in Singapore. The papers there publish interviews with him in which he declares he is going back to Manila.

Arrested For Treason.

Boer Camp, Smalldel, March 30—(delayed in transmission)—General Jan Prinsloo, former Free State commandant, has been arrested on a charge of high treason. The latest news from Brandcroft is to the effect that the federal troops are more than holding their own. They have only nine casualties to date.

Press Censor at Work.

London, April 3—The press messages from the seat of war today are greatly curtailed and multilated, indicating that there are developments at the front.

Arrival of Canal Commissioners.

New York, April 3—The Panama canal commissioners Walker, Pascho, Earnest and Johnson, arrived on the steamer Alleghany today. Walker said they had completed the work of investigating the possibilities of the Panama and Nicaraguan routes. They will report in December.

THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

We believe that Chamberlains's Cough Remedy is the best in the world. A few weeks ago we suffered with a severe cold and a troublesome cough, and having read their advertisements in our own own and other papers we purchased a bottle to see how it would affect us. It cured us before the bottle was more than half used. It is the best medicine out for colds and coughs.—The Herald, Andersonville, Ind. For sale by C. E. Holton, druggist.

Test our shoes and you will always buy them. We sell the best.

LONG LIST FROM HIGH POINT.

A Large Accumulation of Locals and Personals.

Correspondence of the Telegram.

High Point, April 3—Miss Laura Woollen, of Randleman, who has been visiting in the city left on the southbound local last night for Salisbury to spend awhile with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Long.

Weddell Fetter, of Reidsville, spent yesterday in the city. All his old friends are glad to see him.

Miss Leila Kearns arrived home last night from Greensboro.

W. M. Rogan and son Charles spent the day in Greensboro yesterday.

Mr. Harris, of the firm of Harris & Sims, returned from a business trip last night.

Samuel Coffin of the Carolina Furniture Co., Durham, arrived here yesterday and remained over night.

Wescott Roberson, Esq., yesterday took charge of the business of the Lyon agency here.

Our Jew friends, Lewis and Henry Harris are getting ready for the Jewish passover which convenes April 11th.

Hal M. Worth, of Washington, was here yesterday enroute to Asheboro to see his grandfather who is quite sick.

O. L. Sapp was here yesterday.

Dr. W. O. Jones is indisposed at his home.

Mr. and Mr. Holman of Toronto, Canada were here last night enroute from Pinehurst to Asheville.

Heab Reynolds foreman on the work train which is here for several weeks, spent yesterday at his home in Greensboro.

Tramps are becoming numerous on our streets these days. There seems to be a wholesale immigration of them north since the "buds" have opened in the sunny southland.

Jim Reed, express agent on the Asheboro division of the Southern, owns one of the fleetest horses going, so he says.

A crop of California corn, the formation of which is rather peculiar has been raised by J. F. Hayworth of Orinoco township.

T. Morrison Montgomery, who has been in charge of the Kirkman Building and Supply Store, at Greensboro, is at home this week.

Will A. Fields, of Greensboro, accompanied Dr. Brooks here yesterday.

Rev. W. F. Kennett, president of the Methodist Protestant conference of this State, preached an acceptable sermon at the M. P. church Sunday morning.

The High Point Shirt Company, which up to this time has been manufacturing an undergarment, have commenced to make the article from which the enterprise derives its name—shirt. I am glad to know that the company is meeting with phenomenal success.

I learn that a man by the name of Marion Kivett was instantly killed at Rambeur Saturday. He was attempting to get in a buggy with gun in hand, when the trigger struck the wheel. The gun went off, the load taking effect in his heart.

David Bodenhamer died at his home near here Sunday and was buried at Sandy Ridge Saturday. Several relatives of the deceased live here.

Mr. Baugh, the penny photographer, has pulled up stakes and left town, going to Statesville.

Chas. Cutting, of Lexington, was a guest of this city yesterday.

The examples set by the owners of many buildings in placing galvanized cornices on the tops of their fronts is one which would add considerable to the appearance of the business streets if followed by other owners

MANY LIVES SAVED

In almost every neighborhood there is some one whose life has been saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or who has been cured of chronic diarrhoea by the use of that medicine. Such persons make a point of telling of it whenever an opportunity offers, hoping that it may be the means of saying other lives. For sale by C. E. Holton, druggist.

Wheat Thriving

Topeka, April 3—All reports from the Kansas wheat belt show that the crop is in fine condition.

It's funny that a fellow isn't "in the swim" when society throws him overboard.

The fifteen year old son of Ex-Congressman Richmond Pearson died in Washington yesterday.

The University team yesterday defeated Cornell on the formers's grounds 6 to 0.

In saving a woman in from in front of a train at Shenectady, N. Y., James Mynderse, of the local police force, was killed. The woman was not injured.

From the foot of Mrs. Davis Sweet, of Boston, Mass, which had swollen, a surgeon removed a bone formation the exact counterpart of an incisor tooth.

W. W. Mayhew, Merton, Wis., says, "I consider One Minute Cough Cure a most wonderful medicine, quick and safe." It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, grippe, whooping cough, pneumonia and all throat and lung diseases. It's early use prevents consumption. Children always like it and mothers endorse it. Howard Gardner.

THE PORTO RICAN BILL.

If the Republican Vote As They Talk It Will Become a Free Trade Bill.

Washington, April 3—The vote on the Porto Rican bill will be taken in the senate this afternoon. The friends of the bill are confident that it will go through that body as it will be amended by the friends of the measure. Not more than two or three democratic votes will be cast for the bills, while, it is thought some four or five republican votes will be cast against the bill, and in favor of free trade between the United States and Porto Rico.

The fate of the bill after it reaches the house is a matter of conjecture. If the republican opponents of a tariff vote as they talk, it is safe to predict that a free trade subsitute for the bill will be passed by the house.

It is hard to tell at just what hour the bill will be voted upon in the senate. The senate will convene at eleven o'clock, and the debate will proceed until three or four o'clock, when the voting on amendments will begin. It is possible that the final vote may not be reached until about five or six o'clock, or the final vote may come at any hour after three o'clock.

A Little Bit Too Sensitive.

This cold, hard world has few souls as sensitive as a young man who killed himself in Paris the other day. His home was in Lyons, and his father had given to him 30,000 francs, or $6,000, to establish a branch office of their business in Paris. After he had been in Paris for several days his letters home ceased, and he disappeared from the little circle of friends that he had made. He had seemed a quiet, steady fellow, and he had chosen his new associates with discretion. When they missed him, they wrote to his father, supposing that he knew where his son was. The father, however, was ignorant of the young man's whereabouts, and the police were summoned and a search made of his apartments. On the bed in his room was found his dead body, with a note by his side, which said:

"I have lost 25,000 francs of the sum that my father intrusted to me, and as I would not have it believed that I have squandered the money I am killing myself." This furnished a clew, but nothing more could be learned for several days. Finally, when searching the rooms for the young man's property, his pocketbook, with the 25,000 francs, was found in a corner of the bureau drawer, where he had put it and then forgotten.

Did She Get the Hat?

It was a mean trick, of course, and some day she will doubtless get even with him.

She saw him take a piece of paper from his pocket, carefully fold it up, put it in an envelope and then place the envelope in one of the far corners of the drawer of the library table.

"What's that?" she asked.

"Oh, nothing of any consequence," he replied.

Now, if he had simply thrown it carelessly into the drawer she would have thought nothing of it, but the care he took to put it clear over in the far corner and the fact that he seemed ill at ease after he found that his action had been observed aroused her curiosity. She wondered what it was, and she reasoned with herself that he had said it was "nothing of importance," so he would have nobody but himself to blame if she took a look at it. She was justified in inferring from his words that there was no reason why she should not. And this is what she read scribbled on a piece of paper:

"I'll bet you a new hat your curiosity will not permit you to let this alone."

It was a terrible predicament in which to place a woman. How could she claim the new hat without giving herself away?—Chicago Post.

Finding a Mine.

Two cowboys and several sticks of dynamite very suddenly and unexpectedly discovered the Hualipi mines near Kingman, A. T. The cowboys were on their way across the territory, and they had with them several sticks of dynamite, to be used when they reached the Colorado river. One day they camped some seven miles north of where Kingman now is. They left the dynamite among some bowlders at a distance from the camp for safe keeping. The day was unusually hot, and in some unaccountable way the dynamite went off. The cowboys hurried to the place of explosion, and even their inexperienced eyes saw that the dynamite had blown a gold mine into their pockets. As high as $25,000 a month has been taken out of this mine.—Philadelphia Times.

A German steamer arrived at Lorenzo Marquez today with 267 passengers, mostly recruits for the Transvaal.

FREE BLOOD CURE.

Ulcers, cancers, eating sores, Painful swellings, effects of blood poison, persistent eruptions, that refuse to heal under ordinary treatment are quickly cured by B. B. B. B. thoroughly tested for thirty years, and thousands cured after doctors and patent medicines had failed. For sale by druggists and Howard Gardner in Greensboro at $1 per large bottle, or 6 large bottles (full treatment) $5. To prove our faith in B. B. B. we will send a trial bottle free to sufferers, so they may test the remedy at our expense. Address Blood Balm Co., Atlanta Ga.

REPUBLICANS MOVE GATLING.

PLACE IT WHERE THEY CAN TAKE AN EASY CRACK.

Taylor Will Not Give up Even Though the Court Decides Against Him and Governor Beckham Will Use Force.

Frankfort, April 3—Anticipating an attempt to seize the state buildings in the event of an affirmation of Judge Field's decision by the court of appeals, the republicans today removed the Gatling gun from the state house yard to the executive building where it might be used with effect from the windows. This movement is taken to indicate that the republicans do not intend to evacuate even if the court of appeals decides against Taylor. Taylor is expected to come back to the capitol soon. A large quantity of provisions arrived today on a boat from Cincinnati and were taken to the arsenal. The republicans are preparing for a seige on the state house square or expect more soldiers. It is generally understood should the court of appeals decide in favor of Beckham he will immediately demand possession of the executive offices, backing up his demand with force

TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1900.

THE OPEN DOOR.

Ever since the announcement by the state department of its success in gaining from the European powers their assent to what is known as the "open door" in China, we have been wondering how it was done. Congress also seemed to want some light on the subject, and hence, at the request of the House, the correspondence was laid before it. The negotiations extended from September 6, 1899, to March 20, 1900, and the whole series of documents was put before the House on Tuesday last. It seems to us that this matter has attracted less attention than its importance demanded. That it was a clever piece of diplomacy no one need doubt, but diplomacy these days, like the gun, depends a good deal upon what's behind it. That there is something behind the ready acquiesence of these selfish powers to our demands there can be little doubt. What is that something?

On September 6th the state department sent formal declarations of the wishes of this country regarding China to the governments of England, France, Germany, Russia, Italy and Japan. As is well known, portions of China have already been divided up by all of these powers, except perhaps the two last, into "spheres of influence." That is, in certain sections each power has exclusive privileges. This country had treaties with China before these spheres of influence were set apart. It was in regard to our right by treaty in these territories as well as to what our rights would be if any future division should be made, that this government addressed the powers. All of them acceded to our demands, which related to the duties leviable upon imports, to harbor dues, and to railroad charges This summary of their promises is taken from the New York Sun:

Each of the parties says that it will in nowise interfere with any treaty rights or with any vested interest within any so-called "sphere of interest," or leased territory it may have in China, and that the Chinese treaty tariff of the time being shall apply to all merchandise shipped to all such ports as are within such "spheres of interest" (unless they be "free ports"), no matter to what nationality such merchandise may belong, and that duties so leviable shall be collected by the Chinese government. Each power further says that it will levy no higher harbor does on vessels of another nationality frequenting any port in such "sphere" than shall be levied on vessels of its own nationality; and no higher railroad charges over lines built, controlled or operated within its "sphere" on merchandise belonging to citizens or subjects of other nationalities transported through such "sphere" than shall be levied on similar merchandise belonging to its own nationality transported over equal distances.

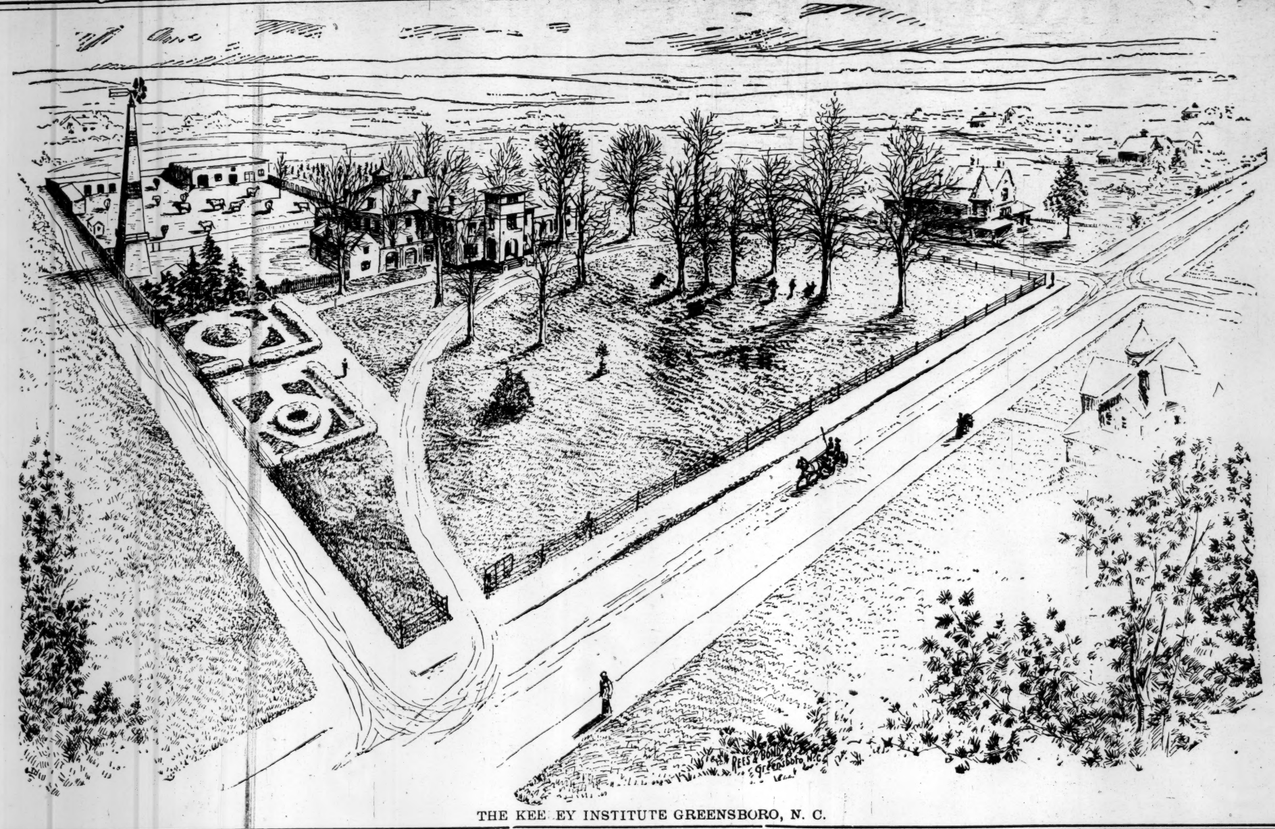
We repeat that the success of this effort, while it only put these powers on record as to their intentions in the future, the state department, is highly interesting and deserves much more notice than it has received. It shows that our commerce in China is safe for the present, at least, and we have made no concessions or promises to the powers in return. Now England has been battling against these powers for years, single handed, for the "open door" in China, her particular contention being that the Celestial empire should not be dismembered at all. For years, unaided by Japan or the United States, who are now in practical agreement with her, Great Britain kept the claws of the hungry beasts from the weakened carcass of the dead empire. But she failed at last and was forced to practically give up this doctrine. Soon after that the roll of Dewey's guns were heard at Manila, and their echoes reached the listening ears of the powers and announced to them that a new force was in the east, and a force that must be reckoned with, a nation, too, that found itself in agreement with England and Japan, the powers which stood against the others for the open door. And that is the reason why Secretary Hay has succeeded in his diplomatic scheme. That is why these powers seem to graciously grant what they were preparing to refuse to the world. And they grant it graciously because they are unable to enforce their desires, and they know it. And it all came from the work of that May morning at Manila.

A peculiar thing about bridal pairs is that they are softest when green.

At Washington Street Church Last Night.

"The Word is Nigh Thee" was the text from which Mr. Wildman preached one of the clearest, simplest gospel sermons to which our people have ever listened. The night before he invited the children to come last night, promising to make the story of salvation so clear and plain that they could understand it, and truly he kept his promise. The grown people, as well as the children, heard him gladly and were greatly edified.

Mr. Wildman will preach his last sermon tonight. There will, no doubt, be a full house.



THE KEELEY INSTITUTE GREENSBORO, N. C.

SAVED FROM WRECK AND RUIN.

HOW THE KEELEY INSTITUTE BRIGHTENS LIVES AND HOMES.

A Telegram Man Calls on Col. Osborn at the Place Where Manhood is Released From Alcoholic Toils.

"What is past is past; there is a future for every man who has the virtue to repent and the energy to atone."

The writer called on Col. Osborn at his office in the Keeley Institute yesterday afternoon and found that genial gentleman leisurely reclining in a comfortable office chair. In response to the query: "How is the Institute progressing?" he began talking, and it would take columns to properly record all that he said. He pointed to a neat frame on the wall under the glass of which was written the words quoted above, and said: "That is our motto. It was suggested by a happy man, who, when leaving the Institute, being cured of the alcoholic disease, turned back and repeated these words, and added that we should adopt them as our motto. We have done so. It would do you good," continued Col. Osborn, "to read the letters we are daily receiving from former patients, men who came here as physical wrecks, with reeling step and addled brain, to return home free from the blighting curse of the desire for rum, and, filled with new life and restored manhood, are in the full enjoyment of happiness and the pursuit of fortune."

"Will the death of Dr. Keeley have any effect upon the future of your work?" was asked.

"None in the world. A great benefactor has been taken, but the remedy which his scientific research gave to suffering and despondent humanity still lives to bless men and break the shackles on those who, unaided, are hopelessly bound. Dr. Keeley's two surviving partners are making the remedy, and it will achieve its greatest success in the years to come."

"How many patients are you treating now?" was the next question.

"About twenty," was the response. "Since the present company took charge of the Institute here, and I became manager, eight years ago, we have cured about 2,500 men in North Carolina. We are now in correspondence with 1,700 of them, whom we know are cured and happy men. There have been eighteen or twenty states represented here, and the work is growing constantly. There is one point that many people, even here in Greensboro, do not understand, and that is, we do not take people here merely to sober them up. They are regarded as sick people and are treated as such. I frequently have all sorts of prices offered me by men who just want to come here and get sober. We do not want them: We want men who are in earnest and who have a desire to be cured. We have white nurses, men who themselves have been cured, and who, knowing the melancholy condition of the patient from experience, treat him with all kindness and know how to sympathize with him.

"We serve meals in the rooms to all who do not care to go to the dining room, or who are too unwell to go. All patients board here in the Institute, and the table is supplied with the very best to be had. We make our own butter, and use milk from our own herd of registered cows. The success of the Institute is due to the fact that men are in charge of it who thoroughly know their business, and know what kind of treatment the patients require. They have studied it scientifically and know it also by experience."

Col. Osborn then showed the reporter a number of letters from Keeley graduates. One man who was treated five years ago said: "I never fail to say a good word for Keeley. I am glad to testify that I still do not want the accursed stuff." He quoted Rev. Dr. N. F. Reid, who said that he preached against it and would not use it in sickness. He told his son he wanted to go into the presence of God free from it.

Another man writing about the cure said he was thankful that it had saved and crowned with honor the last years of Judge Dossey Battle, who recently died. After graduating at Keeley, Dossey Battle actively engaged for more than a year in helping to save others as he had been saved. The writer paid a high tribute to Col. Osborn for the kindly and generous manner in which he treated and cared for those addicted to the destructive habit of drunkenness.

Still another man who was treated several years ago wrote under recent date that he is well—saved. He says he has not used or had any desire to use any intoxicants. His energy has returned, and he is able to put in full time in his business, which has wonderfully increased. "I shall certainly" he says "never forget your kindness to me when I was at Keeley.

"I love the Institute," another man writes. "It will do all it claims. It is the best and most wonderful thing I have ever known. I can truthfully say I have not touched a drop since leaving there and have no desire to do so."

A man who came to the Institute with the diagnosis of his physician that he was hopelessly ill with Bright's disease, went home a cured man. After several years he writes: "It is useless for me to say more than that it saved me from a drunkard's grave. I am well and have no desire for liquor. I only regret that I did not take it sooner."

Another says: "I have no better friend on earth than Keeley. My health is perfect. I shall never forget the kind treatment I received while there You have done wonders for me and my friends."

The reporter was forcibly impressed with the fact that every letter—and there were many of them—spoke in terms of the warmest appreciation of the very kind treatment received while at the Institute, and there were many words of the highest praise of Col. Osborn for his personal efforts to encourage and inspire with hope the men who were struggling to be free. We are permitted to make the following extracts from a lengthy letter from a man who was addicted to the morphine habit as well as that of whiskey, which is well worth reading:

"My Dear Col. Osborn:—It certainly affords me great pleasure to embrace the opportunity of writing to you concerning my welfare. If there is a person in this whole universe that my heart goes out to in gratitude and praise, you are that person, for by your care and kindness, I was, through the instrumentality of the Keeley treatment, saved from the most degrading and remorseless habit that ever claimed a victim as it's own—the power of the morphine habit, that blights one's life, destroys his ambition and drags him down to the lowest degradation. I cannot describe my suffering and humiliation during the four years that I was a victim to the morphine habit. The pictures are too dark and desolate. Too well do I remember the sad faces of my friends and relatives, as, with hearts bowed down with grief and sorrow, they saw me falling lower and lower every day. They talked and plead, but they might as well have plead with me to stop the sun in its onward course, as to stop my opium habit. I was bound hand and foot as secure as any convict in prison I thought of nothing but morphine and how to raise the money to secure more when my supply was exhausted. Its chains were fastened tight about me, and I was as a helpless as a child. I lost positions as soon as my employers would discover my habits, which would only be a short time. Friends deserted me, relatives looked upon me with scorn and derision. my money was fast disappearing, or had disappeared, and I found myself without friends or money and addicted to the habit which was worse than death.

"I became reckless, sold my clothes from off my back to get morphine. What a pitiful condition I was in! I had almost given up in despair and felt that I was doomed and ruined, and knew that I would soon go to my grave disgraced and dishonored. While pondering over my helpless condition I thought of you and the great work you were engaged in and wrote you, as you will no doubt remember, explaining my condition. I received a very kind and sympathetic letter from you; and to my heart it was the first ray of hope that I had received in many a day. In that letter you stated that I could be cured by the remedies of the Keeley Institute, and restored to manhood, if I would place myself under the treatment and follow instructions. * * * So on a September morning, you remember, I left home a perfect physical wreck, discouraged and as melancholy as a person could be, for the Keeley Institute at Greensboro. I do not like to dwell upon this picture for it is a sad one to me, and I have told you of it before.

"I will pull the curtain aside and look at the other picture, which is far more pleasant. When I arrived at the Institute and was greeted by you so warmly, and your other attendants, your kind words of sympathy and encouragement were precious to me, and shall live in my memory as long as life shall last. You know how I entered on the treatment and tried to follow your instructions. I never passed a pleasanter time in my life than I did at the Keeley Institute. Every one was so kind and sympathetic, and I really became attached to the dear old Institute before I had been under its roof many days. I have had several occasions to be grateful and feel happy, but the happiest moment of my life was on that cloudy October morning when Dr. Williams called me into his office and told me kindly that I had been without morphine for over a week. I felt like shouting. I could scarcely believe it, and yet I knew it was true, and that I was saved from death and destruction, and restored to manhood again, all through the mercy of God, and your devoted kindness and the instrumentality of the Keeley cure. * * * I have held it ever since. I still remain cured, and by God's help I expect to remain so * * * I cannot express my gratitude and appreciation I have been saved and redeemed and may God abundantly bless you and the Keeley treatment for what you have done is my daily prayer. * * * I stand ready at all times to speak for you and the Keeley cure—the grandest and greatest institution on earth Please remember me kindly to every one at the Institute and if I can ever be of service to you in any way, please command me.

"Your grateful friend,"

That letter is a sample of many. There is no fake about that. It is from the heart of a grateful man who feels what he says.

After spending some time in looking over the letters, Col. Osborn carried us through the buildings and grounds, all so admirably arranged, so quiet, yet attractive and inviting. It is an ideal place, and we were so impressed with its charming beauty and able management that we would like to go into a descriptive article. However, we will defer that for some future time.

A GREAT TRUTH.

All organized living things, whether belonging to the animal or vegetable kingdom contain within themselves the germs of death and decay.

Germs of disease are often generated within the human system through imperfect digestion of food, producing various poisons which scientists have denominated ptomaines. A stomach weakened by abuse, gorged with over eating or over burdened with hot bread, too rich or greasy foods or those too highly seasoned, becomes weakened and fails to thoroughly digest the food. A heavy, sodden mass is accumulated in the stomach to ferment as the first step in its decay, giving off foul gasses to distend the stomach, and poison the blood, until it becomes thin, weak and lacking in the red corpuscles so necessary to perfect health.

The over distended stomach presses upon the heart, and the latter organ is also disturbed through sympathy, the same system of nerves being distributed to both organs. Thus palpitation and irregular action of the heart with its attendant shortness of breath, result, and in time, disease of the heart itself is established.

The gases and other poisons generated from undigested, fermenting and decaying food in the stomach becloud the brain, causing headaches, and pain in the eyes.

Being absorbed into the blood these poisons reach every part and organ of the system. The kidneys are thereby poisoned, causing Bright's disease and diabetes. Filtering through the skin, troublesome skin diseases often show themselves.

Every organ and every nerve, depending as they do for their nourishment and renewal upon the stomach, weak digestion shows itself not alone in loss of appetite and flesh, but also in nervousness, debility, bad complexion and many other derangements.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery tones and regulates the stomach; stimulates the digestive juices; invigorates the torpid liver; promotes intestinal strength; clears bilious poisons and diseased germs out of the circulation; gives the blood-making glands keen assimilative power, and furnishes Nature with the fresh, abundant nutrition out of which she manufactures firm flesh, strong muscles, clear skin, healthy lung tissue and nerve-fiber, and gives sound, enduring, active energy to the whole system.

DYSPEPSIA

"My wife suffered for many years from Nervous Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Sleeplessness and Nervous Debility" writes John Kelloes, Philadelphia. "We tried many physicians and numerous remedies, but with no results, until I heard of Johnson's Dyspepsia Cure. We bought six bottles, and the results far surpassed our expectations. She now eats and sleeps well, is gaining in flesh, and her color, which had got to be yellow and sickly, is now as fresh as when we were first married, and I believe that Johnson's Dyspepsia Cure has made her ten years younger."

SCROFULA AND ITS AWFUL HORRORS

—CURED BY—

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

A MOST WONDERFUL CURE.

A Grand Old Lady Gives Her Experience.

Mrs. Thankful Orilla Hurd lives in the beautiful village of Brighton, Livingston Co., Mich. This venerable and highly respected lady was born in the year 1812, the year of the great war, in Hebron, Washington Co., New York. She came to Michigan in 1840, the year of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." All her faculties are excellently preserved, and possessing a very retentive memory, her mind is full of interesting reminiscences of her early life, of the early days of the State of Michigan and the interesting and remarkable people she has met, and the stirring events of which she was a witness. But nothing in her varied and manifold recollections are more marvelous and worthy of attention than are her experiences in the use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. Mrs. Hurd inherited a tendency and predisposition to scrofula, that terribly destructive blood taint which has cursed and is cursing the lives of thousands and marking thousands more as victims of the death angel. Transmitted from generation to generation, it is found in nearly every family in one form or another. It may make its appearance in dreadful running sores, in unsightly swellings in the neck or goitre, or in eruptions of varied forms. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may be known as catarrh in the head, or developing in the lungs it may be, and often is, the prime cause of consumption.

Speaking of her case, Mrs. Hurd says: "I was troubled for many years with a bad skin disease. My arms and limbs would break out in a mass of sores, discharging yellow matter. My neck began to swell and became very unsightly in appearance. My body was covered with scrofulous eruptions. My eyes were also greatly inflamed and weakened, and they pained me very much. My blood was in a very bad condition and my head ached severely at frequent intervals, and I had no appetite. I had sores also in my ears. I was in a miserable condition, I had tried every remedy that had been recommended, and doctor after doctor had failed. One of the best physicians in the state told me I must die of scrofulous consumption, as internal abcesses were beginning to form. I at length was told of Dr. Johnston, of Detroit, and his famous Sarsaparilla. I tried a bottle, more as an experiment than anything else, as I had no faith in it, and greatly to my agreeable surprise, I began to grow better. You can be sure I kept on taking it. I took a great many bottles. But I steadily improved until I became entirely well. All the sores healed up, all the bad symptoms disappeared. I gained perfect health, and I have never been troubled with scrofula since. Of course an old lady of 83 years is not a young woman, but I have had remarkably good health since then, and I firmly believe that JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA is the greatest blood purifier and the best medicine in the wide world, both for scrofula and as a spring medicine." This remarkably interesting old lady did not lok to be more than sixty, and she repeated several times, "I believe my life was saved by JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA."

ROBERT HARDY'S SEVEN DAYS

A DREAM AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

By Rev. CHARLES M. SHELDON.
Author of "In His Steps," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong," "Malcom Kirk," Etc.

[Copyright, 1900, by Advance Publishing Co.]

CHAPTER IV.

It was now 10 o'clock, and the day seemed to him cruelly brief for the work he had to do. He entered the office, and almost the first thing he saw on his desk was the following letter, addressed to him, but written in a disguised hand:

Mr. Hardy—It's in the casting room don't heed no leaving after, but maybe the next pot of hot iron that explodes will be next the offis if you think we have been a-out no sols some morning you will wake up missing another thing. We ain't so easy led as some supposes. Better look to house and employ special patrol; if you do we will risk his face for him.

There was no signature to this threatening scrawl, which was purposely misspelled and ungrammatically composed. Mr. Hardy had received threats before and paid little attention to them. He prided himself on his steady nerves and his contempt of all such methods used to scare him. Only a coward, he reasoned, would ever write an anonymous letter of such a character. Still this morning he felt disturbed. His peculiar circumstances made the whole situation take on a more vivid coloring. Besides all that, he could not escape the conviction that he was in a certain sense responsible for the accident in the casting room. It was not his particular business to inspect machinery. But his attention had been called to it, and he felt now as if he had been criminally careless in not making the inspection in the absence of the regular officer. An investigation of the accident would free Mr. Hardy from legal responsibility, but in the sight of God he felt that he was morally guilty. At this moment Mr. Burns came in. He looked sullen and spoke in a low tone:

"Only half the men are back this morning, sir. Scoville's death and the injuries of the others have had a bad effect on the rest."

Mr. Hardy considered the letter nervously in his hand.

"Mr. Burns, I would like to apologize to you for my neglect of the injured men. Who are they and how badly are they hurt?"

Burns looked surprised, but made answer, describing briefly the accidents. Mr. Hardy listened intently with bowed head. At last he looked up and said abruptly:

"Come into the casting room."

They went out of the office, passed through the repairing shops and entered the foundry department. Even on that bright winter morning, with the air outside so clear and cool, the atmosphere in this place was murky and close. The forges in the blacksmith room at the farther end glowed through the smoke and dust like smoldering piles of rubbish dumped here and there by chance upon some desolate moor and stirred by ill enclosed demons of the nether world. Mr. Hardy shuddered as he thought of standing in such an atmosphere all day to work at severe muscular toil. He recalled with sharp vividness a request made only two months before for dust fans which had proved successful in other shops and which would remove a large part of the heavy, coal laden air, supplying fresh air in its place. The company had refused the request and had even said through one of its officers that when the men were out the company could easily get more.

Mr. Hardy and the foreman paused at the entrance to the casting room where the men had been injured the day before. A few men were working sullenly. Mr. Hardy asked the foreman to call the men together near the other end of the room; he wanted to say something to them. He walked over there while the foreman spoke to the men. They dropped their tools and came over to where Mr. Hardy was standing. They were mostly Scandinavians and Germans, with a sprinkling of Irish and Americans. Mr. Hardy looked at them thoughtfully. They were a hard looking crowd. Then he said very slowly and distinctly:

"You may quit work until after Scoville's funeral. The machinery here needs overhauling."

The men stood impassive for a moment. Finally a big Dane stepped up and said:

"We be no minded to quit work these times. We no can afford it. Give us work in some other place."

Mr. Hardy looked at him and replied quietly:

"The wages will go on just the same while you are out."

There was a perceptible stir among the men. They looked confused and incredulous. Mr. Hardy still looked at them thoughtfully.

Finally the big Dane stepped forward again and said, speaking more respectfully than he did at first:

"Mr. Hardy, we be thinking maybe you would like to help towards him the family of [illegible] and others as be hurt. I [illegible] to take up purse for [illegible] injured. We all take hand in't. My brother be one lose his two eyes."

"No, no thanks! I'll do something more."

A tear [illegible] rolled down the grimy cheek of the big fellow and dropped [illegible] coal dust at his feet. Mr. Hardy [illegible] that he was looking at a [illegible] man. He choked down a sob, and putting his hand in his pocket pulled out all the change he had and [illegible] into the Dane's hand. Then, seeing that it was only $4 or $5, he pulled out his purse and emptied out of its [illegible], while Burns, the foreman, and all the men looked on in stupefied wonder.

"No, no thanks! I'll do something more."

Mr. Hardy walked away, feeling as if the ground were heavy under him. What was all his money compared with that life which had been sacrificed to that gas poisoned sepulcher? He could not banish from his mind the picture of that face as it looked to him when he drew back the sheet and looked at it.

He hurried back to the office through the yard and sat down at the well worn desk. The mail had come in, and half a dozen letters lay there. What did it all amount to, this grind of business, when the heartache of the world called for so much sympathy? Then over him came the sense of his obligations to his family—Clara's need of a father's help, George going to the bad, Alice in need of sympathy, his wife weeping even now at home, the church and Sunday school where he had been of so little use, the family of Scoville to be provided for, the other injured men to be visited, improvements for the welfare of the men in the shops to be looked after and the routine of his business—all these things crowded in upon him, and still he saw the face and heard the voice of Eternity, "Seven days more to live!"

He sank into a reverie for a moment. He was roused by the sounding of the noon whistle. What, noon already? So swiftly had the time gone! He turned to his desk, bewildered, and picked up his letters, glanced over them hurriedly and then gave directions for the answers of some of them to his impatient clerk, who had been wondering at his employer's strange behavior this morning. Among the letters was one which made his cheek burn with self reproach. It was an invitation to a club dinner to be given that evening in honor of some visiting railroad president.

It was just such an occasion as he had enjoyed very many times before, and the recollection brought to mind the number of times he had gone away from his home and left his wife sitting drearily by the fire. How could he have done it? He tossed the gilded invitation fiercely into the wastebasket and, rising, walked his room, thinking, thinking. He had so much to do and so little time to do it in! He thought thus a moment, then went out and walked rapidly over to the hotel where he was in the habit of getting lunch when he did not go home. He ate a little hurriedly and then hastened out.

As he was going out upon the sidewalk two young men came in and jostled against him. They were smoking and talking in a loud tone. Mr. Hardy caught the sound of his own name. He looked at the speaker, and it was the face of the young man he had seen in his dream, the one who had insulted George and struck him afterward. For a moment Mr. Hardy was tempted to confront the youth and inquire into his son's habits.

"No," he said to himself after a pause; "I will have a good talk with George himself. That will be the best."

He hurried back to the office and arranged some necessary work for his clerk, took a walk through the other office, then went to the telephone and called up the superintendent of the Sunday school, who was a bookkeeper in a clothing house. He felt an intense desire to arrange for an interview with him as soon as possible. Word came back from the house that the superintendent had been called out of town by serious illness in his old home and would not be back until Saturday. Mr. Hardy felt a disappointment more keen than the occasion seemed to warrant. He was conscious that the time was very brief. He had fully made up his mind that so far as in him lay he would redeem his selfish past and make a week such as few men ever made. He was just beginning to realize that circumstances are not always in our control. We are obliged to wait for time to do some things. We cannot redeem seven years of selfishness with seven days of self denial. The death of Scoville revealed to Mr. Hardy his powerlessness in the face of certain possibilities. He now feared that the superintendent would fail to return in time to let him confess to him his just sorrow for his lack of service in the school. He sat down to his desk and under that impulse wrote a letter that expressed in part how he felt. Then he jotted down the following items to be referred to the proper authorities of the road:

Item 1. The dust in the blacksmith shop and in the brass polishing rooms is largely unnecessary. The new Englefield revolving rolling fans and elevator ought to be introduced in both departments. The cost will be but an item to the road and would prolong the life and add to the comfort of the employees. Very important.

Item 2. Organized and intelligent effort should be made by all railroad corporations to lessen Sunday work in shops and on the road. All perishable freight should be so handled as to call for the services of as few men on Sunday as possible, and excursion and passenger trains should be discontinued except in cases of unavoidable necessity.

Item 3. The inspection of boilers, retorts, castings, machinery of all kinds, should be made by thoroughly competent and responsible men, who shall answer for all unnecessary accidents by swift and severe punishment in case of loss of life or limb.

Item 4. In case of injury or death to employees, if incurred through the neglect of the company to provide safety, it should provide financial relief for the families thus injured or stricken by death and so far as possible arrange for their future.

Item 5. Any well organized railroad could, with profit to its employees, have upon its staff of salaried men a corps of chaplains or preachers whose business is would be to look after the religious interests of the employees.

Under this last item Mr. Hardy wrote in a footnote, "Discuss feasibility of this with Mr. B., influential director."

It was now 3 o'clock. The short winter day was fast drawing to a close. The hum of the great engine in the machine shop was growing very wearisome to the manager. He felt sick of its throbbing tremor and longed to escape from it. Ordinarily he would have gone to the clubroom and had a game of chess with a member, or else he would have gone down and idled away an hour or two before supper at the Art museum, where he was a constant visitor—that was when he had plenty of time and the business of the office was not pressing. Young Wellman, however, had succeeded to the clerical details of the shops, and Mr. Hardy's time was generally free after 4 o'clock.

He had been oppressed with the thought of the other injured men. He must go and see them. He could not rest till he had personally visited them. He went out and easily ascertained where the men lived. Never before did the contrast between the dull, uninteresting row of shop tenements and his own elegant home rise up so sharply before him. In fact, he had never given it much thought before. Now, as he looked forward to the end of the week, he knew that at its close he would be no richer, no better able to enjoy luxuries than the dead man lying in No. 760. He wondered vaguely but passionately how he could make use of what he had heaped together to make the daily lives of some of these poor men happier.

He found the man who had lost both and he said to him:

"Olaf, Mr. Hardy come to see you."

"Hardy? Hardy?" queried the man in a peevish tone. "What do I know him to be?"

"The manager. The one who donate so really much moneys to you."

"Ah!" with an indescribable accent. "He make me work on Sunday. He lose me my two eyes. A bad man, Svord. I will no have anything to do with him."

And the old descendant of a thousand kings turned his face to the wall and would not even so much as make a motion toward his visitor. His brother offered a rude apology. Mr. Hardy replied in a low tone:

"Say nothing about it. I deserve all your brother says. But for a good reason I wish Olaf would say he forgives me."

Mr. Hardy came nearer the bed and spoke very earnestly and as if he had known the man intimately:

"I did you a great wrong to order the work on Sunday and in not doing my duty concerning the inspection of the machinery. I have come to say so and to ask your forgiveness. I may never see you again. Will you say to me, 'Brother, I forgive you?'"

There was a moment of absolute passivity on the part of the big fellow; then a very large and brawny hand was extended, and the blind man said: "Yes, I forgive. We learned that in the old Bible at Svendorf."

Mr. Hardy laid his hand in the other, and his lips moved in prayer of humble thanksgiving. What, Robert Hardy! Is this that proud man who only the day before was so lifted up with selfishness that he could coldly criticise his own minister for saying that people ought to be more Christlike? Are you standing here in this poor man's house which two days ago you would not have deigned to enter and beseech him as your brother in the great family of God to forgive you for what you have done and left undone? Yes; you have looked into the Face of Eternity. You realize now what life really means and what souls are really worth.

He went out after a few words with the family and saw all the other injured men. By the time he had finished these visits it was dark, and he eagerly turned home, exhausted with the day's experience, feeling as if he had lived in a new world and at the same time wondering at the rapidity with which the time had fled.

He sighed almost contentedly to himself as he thought of the evening with his family and how he would enjoy it after the disquiet of the day. His wife was there to greet him, and Alice and Clara and Bess clung about him as he took off his coat and came into the beautiful room where a cheerful fire was blazing. Will came down stairs as his father came in, and in the brief interval before supper was ready Mr. Hardy related the scenes of the day.

They were all shocked to hear of Scoville's death, and Mrs. Hardy at once began to discuss some plans for relieving the family. Bess volunteered to give up half her room to one of the children, and Alice quietly outlined a plan which immediately appeared to her father businesslike and feasible. In the midst of this discussion supper was announced, and they all sat down.

"Where is George?" asked Mr. Hardy. Ordinarily he would have gone on with the meal without any reference to the boy, because he was so often absent from the table. Tonight he felt an irresistible longing to have all his children with him.

"He said he was invited out to supper with the Bramleys," said Clara.

Mr. Hardy received the announcement in silence. He felt the bitterness of such indifference on the part of his older son. "What!" he said to himself. "When he knows I had such a little while left, could he not be at home?" Then almost immediately flashed into him the self reproach even stronger than his condemnation of his boy. "How much have I done for him these last ten years to win his love and protect him from evil?"

After supper Mr. Hardy sat down by his wife, and in the very act he blushed with shame at the thought that he could not recall when he had spent an evening thus. He looked into her face and asked gently:

"Mary, what do you want me to do? Shall I read as we used to in the old days?"

"No; let us talk together," replied Mrs. Hardy, bravely driving back her tears. "I cannot realize what it all means. I have been praying all day. Do you still have the impression you had this morning?"

"Mary, I am if anything even more convinced that God has spoken to me. The impression has been deepening with me all day. When I looked into poor Scoville's face, the terrible nature of my past selfish life almost overwhelmed me. Oh, why have I abused God's goodness to me so awfully?"

There was silence a moment. Then Mr. Hardy grew more calm. He began to discuss what he would do the second day. He related more fully the interview with the men in the shop and his visits to the injured. He drew Clara to him and began to inquire into her troubles in such a tender, loving way that Clara's proud, passionate, willful nature broke down, and she sobbed out her story to him as she had to her mother the night before.

Mr. Hardy promised Clara that he would see James the next day. It was true that James Caxton had only a week before approached Mr. Hardy and told him in very manful fashion of his love for his daughter, but Mr. Hardy had treated it as a child's affair, and in accordance with his usual policy in family matters had simply told Clara and Bess to discontinue their visits at the old neighbor's. But now that he heard the story from the lips of his own daughter he saw the seriousness of it, and crowding back all his former pride and hatred of the elder Caxton he promised Clara to see James the next day.

Clara clung to her father in loving surprise. She was bewildered, as were all the rest, by the strange event that had happened to her father, but she never had so felt his love before, and, forgetting for awhile the significance of his wonderful dream, she felt happy in his presence and in his affection for her.

The evening had sped on with surprising rapidity while all these matters were being discussed, and as it drew near to midnight again Robert Hardy felt almost happy in the atmosphere of that home and the thought that he could still for a little while create joy for those who loved him. Suddenly he spoke of his other son:

"I wish George would come in. Then our family circle would be complete. But it is bedtime for you, Bess, and all of us, for that matter."

It was just then that steps were heard on the front porch, and voices were heard as if talking in whispers. The bell rang. Mr. Hardy rose to go to the door. His wife clung to him terrified.

"Oh, don't go, Robert! I am afraid for you."

"Why, Mary, it cannot be anything

There was his son George, too drunk to stand alone.

to harm me. Don't be alarmed."

Nevertheless he was a little startled. The day had been a trying one for him. He went to the door, his wife and the children following him close behind. He threw it wide open, and there, supported by two of his companions, one of them the young man Mr. Hardy had seen in the hotel lobby at noon, was his son George, too drunk to stand alone. He leered into the face of his father and mother with a drunken look that froze their souls with despair as the blaze of the hall lamp fell upon him reeling there.

And so the first of Robert Hardy's seven days came to an end.

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMEN WHO WORK.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 12.

Though only 19 years old, I suffered from pains and female troubles two years. Last spring I got so bad I had to quit work. I had to support myself, and could not afford a high-priced doctor. I got one bottle of Wine of Cardui and that made me feel better. Have now used several bottles and am well. My mother used the Wine for Change of Life and was greatly relieved.

MISS MARGARET WALSH.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Many girls and women find it necessary to earn their own living in various kinds of employment. Their work is often so hard and confining that the health breaks down. Their delicate constitutions are unfitted for tiresome tasks. Weakness nearly always makes its appearance in the peculiarly delicate womanly organs. Constant standing on the feet, and coming and going at the beck of a superintendent or foreman, induces falling of the womb, leucorrhœa, headache and backache. The pay of women workers is often so notoriously small that when sickness comes they have no money to engage skillful physicians. To them Wine of Cardui is truly a blessing. It cures them of their ills at a small cost, and they can act as their own physicians. No doctor can do as much for "female troubles" as Wine of Cardui.

Rogers-Grilley Company.

Next Friday at the Normal College, the fifth entertainment of the course will be given by Mr. Van Vechten Rogers, harpist, and Mr. Chas. Grilley, impersonator. These gentlemen come to us with the highest endorsement from newspapers all over the country. The News and Observer, Raleigh, says:

"Last night's entertainment by the Rogers-Grilley Company, was no disappointment to those who were present This was the third number of the Star Course, and was the most pleasant number of the series yet presented. Mr. Rogers as a harpist has few equals His serenade and popular melodies were particularly enjoyable, and every number was encored.

"Mr. Grilley is an inimitable mimic and anecdote teller. His selections, 'The Rivals,' and the scene from 'Rip Van Winkle,' were excellently rendered, and he grew more popular with the audience as the performance lengthened. It was a delightful entertainment, and lovers of music were given quite as rare a treat as were those who delight in laughable situations."

Mrs. F. E. Ross, Treasurer

Died on the Train.

Mr. Arthur E Rice, of Leicester, England, died Sunday on the southern bound vestibule, between Charlotte and Salisbury. Mr. Rice was a consumptive, and was enroute to Los Angeles, California, hoping, with the never failing hope of the consumptive, to yet regain his health, in that equable clime. He boarded the sleeper at New York, occupying a berth in one of the tourists' cars. The porter of the car and and conductor looked after him and did what they could for him. He was suffering very much, and the porter remained with him after reaching Salisbury, for some time, but was called out to attend to some train duty. When he returned he found Mr. Rice dead.

THEY ARE SHORT.

Mr. A. W. Vicory is improving his property on West Market street and will soon erect a handsome house with modern improvements there.

Mr. C. W. Gamble, who has been confined to his home in Summerfield for three weeks, with grip, is back at his post with J. M. Hendrix & Co.

Mr. T. M. Pickard is today moving his stock of groceries from the stand lately occupied by Smith & Murchison to his store on East Market street.

The house and lot of Mr. C. S. Watson, in South Greensboro, was sold yesterday, through the real estate department of the Southern Loan & Trust Company, to Capt. Piper.

Mrs. N. C. Weatherly's store is crowded today with fair visitors, it being her spring opening. She says she has the largest displayed lot of trimmed hats ever shown shown in Greensboro.

At the Academy.

Anthony Hope, the novelist's greatest play, "The Adventure of Lady Ursula," the comedy success of the New York Lyceum and the Duke of York's Theatre, London, as interpreted by the William Morris Company, is an early attraction announced for the academy of music. Mr. Hope is also the author of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

New Insurance Rating.

There is to be a new fire insurance rating for Greensboro. Mr. James A. Young, special agent of the Southeastern Tariff Association is in the city for that purpose. It seems to be the impression that rates on all dwellings will remain the same, but that a change will be made on business property. For the past two years insurance rates here have demoralized. It is the intention now to establish a uniform rate.

APPROBATION AT WHITTSETT.

Highly Gratified That Professionalism is to be Eliminated

Correspondence of the Telegram.

Whittsett, N. C. April 3. — The Whittsett team has always been a student team, and the move now making for clearing the field of professionals meets with great appropriation here. While students proper may often have another team to score them heavily, it is a satisfaction to feel that it has been done in many cases by professionals and not by students proper. No doubt, the public will again become interested in school athletics as of yore when the professional is banished forever from the school diamond.

A delegation of eight or ten will attend the State Y. M. C. A. convention from this place.

Preparations are going actively forward for commencement which occurs this year May 23rd. The chief is Mr. Chas. C. Barnhart, of the senior class.

REMARKABLE CURE OF RHEUMATISM.

Kenna, Jackson Co., W. Va.

About three years ago my wife had an attack of rheumatism which confined her to her bed for over a month and rendered her unable to walk a step without assistance, her limbs being swollen double their normal size. Mr. S. Maddox insisted on my using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I purchased a fifty-cent bottle and used it according to the directions and the next morning she walked to breakfast without assistance in any manner, and she has not had a single attack since.—A. B. HOTEL GUILFORD,

GREENSBORO, N. C.

This hotel, just completed and occupying the site of the old Benbow House, has been built at a considerable outlay, and neither pains nor expense have been spared to equip it in a manner to entitle it to rank with strictly good, modern hostelries. As such, we open it, and cater, with strong confidence, to the appreciative.

OPENED SATURDAY, MARCH 31st, 1900.

HOWELL COBB, PROPRIETOR.

Next to the Consumer is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking post, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity

They say to us: "We must have so much for our trees cut and work." After a while it is "up to you." Don't kick. You don't suppose we have nerve enough to put up prices unless they had first been put up on us. No, indeed. But prices are NOT high. They have been to low and are just now getting reasonable. Your children will be glad to build at double the price it now costs you. It is a trite, but true saying, if you want to build, "Now is the time."

And ours is the place to get the stuff.
